

Heathrow Holdings - Glasgow Airport: Case Study

Designed for connection. How Heathrow Holdings created a social and hybrid workplace.

When Heathrow Holdings relocated to a new workplace in Glasgow, the ambition was clear. Create a more dynamic environment that supports hybrid working, encourages interaction, and gives people greater choice in how they spend their day. The result is a workplace that feels adaptable, connected and ready for whatever the day demands.

A carefully selected mix of Orangebox furniture helps shape a variety of settings across the workspace. From ergonomic task seating of Do and Eva to secluded spaces created by Coppice and conversation-focused areas furnished with Convo, each product plays a role in supporting different ways of working. Border and Woods help define spaces naturally, creating destinations across the office without interrupting flow.

Material choices bring warmth and character to the workplace. Rich purple, burgundy and mauve upholstered elements sit alongside soft greys, white work surfaces, and natural timber elements, creating an environment that feels both contemporary and welcoming. Biophilic touches add texture and lightness throughout, giving the space a calm, grounded quality. Together, these elements create a setting that feels considered and effortless, balancing moments of energy with places to pause and focus

Delivered in November 2024, the finished space combined thoughtful design, considered materials and a shared commitment to sustainability, whilst remaining within budget.

Working in partnership throughout the project, Wagstaff, JM Architects and Orangebox created a workplace designed for real life; a workplace that not only performs for its people, but also Heathrow Holding's long-term environmental goals.
